My current body of work explores the fusion of several techniques, which I have been refining since 2003. Crocheted and knitted fine wire is combined with shell, PMC silver or sometimes used alone in sculptural form, to create cuff bracelets, necklaces, collars and rings which I then weave with gemstones, pearls and crystals. I have a life-long knowledge of knitting and crochet which gives an endless supply of inspiration for stitches as well as for pattern and colour. I have designed a collection priced to appeal to a wide range of customers, from simple pendants selling at $50 to elaborate collars and cuffs up to $2000.

Garuda Trading was established in 1999 and despite the current financial climate, we are still bringing you fine quality Dharma items from the Himalayan regions. We are based in Cornwall, a peninsula surrounded by ocean and located in the South West of England. Our online collection continues to expand, along with our understanding of the items we source. Our activity is partly the fruition of seeds planted during my monastic years as an ordained Buddhist monk. As practicing Buddhists, the view of right livelihood is extremely important to my wife Pema and myself (the two folks who deal with your orders and manage the website). Your positive feedback shows us that Garuda Trading continues to be a worthwhile contribution in helping to support the Buddha Dharma flourish outside of Asia. It is also a great source of joy to know that, in some small way, we help aid your Dharma practice.

The science represented in the "Ring" technology is both ancient and modern. The so-called sacred or royal cubit length of 20.6 inches is the controlling factor in the construction. From the works of John Archibald Wheeler, the term Tensor, and its description as being formed when the ends of a piece of wire are joined in a loop, links the ring technology to modern advanced physics. At the time of Wheeler's writing, there was no known application for the Tensor except as a mathematical theory.

Our fiction list showcases intelligent, challenging, and distinctive novels that sit at the intersection of the literary and the commercial: emotionally engaging stories with strong narratives and distinctive voices. In addition to being beautifully written, we hope our novels play their part in introducing the reader to a different culture or an interesting historical period/event, and deeply explore the human condition in all its vagaries. We aim to publish novels that matter, that stay with you long after the last page is turned.
