Many of New World Library's books are categorized as New Age, though Allen says "there's really nothing new in New Age; it's been around for a long time. It's the perennial philosophy, after all. Certainly for many, though, a New Age is dawning. Perhaps it will prove to be a great New Renaissance, possibly even an era of cooperation and global peace. We certainly hope so, and we are publishing material that can show us how to create far better lives for ourselves (such as Eckhart Tolle's, The Power of Now) and a world that works far better (such as Active Hope by Joanna Macy & Chris Johnstone and The Power of Partnership by Riane Eisler)."

Many of the retailers who order from us share these values, which often makes the difference between simply surviving as a business and succeeding in their goals and mission. If you, as an individual, can identify such a business in your community, you would do well to support them, and make sure that energy is a healthy part of your community well into the future. And we would like to know about them.

EarthEar

From the roots of nature sound recording, originally focused on species identification and later popularized with LPs of much-loved natural sounds, the field of environmental sound production is branching wildly. Much as photography emerged as a creative medium a century ago, soundscape art is coming alive, exploring terrain that is at once more subtle, more vivid, and more experimental. Also as in photography, the artistic choices involve picking a perspective from which to record the world, deciding what takes to include in the final "show", and using an array of studio techniques that create subtle or startling variations in the original material, highlighting different aspects of the subject matter, so that the end result is sometimes concrete and readily recognizable, and sometimes abstract and more suggestive than descriptive

Joe Bongiorno

<https://joebongiorno.com>

“Pianist Joe Bongiorno’s latest solo release, Mesmerized, easily merits its title. The CD’s 12 instrumental tracks surround the listener with such irresistible, serene melodies that it would be difficult to not fall under the music’s spell. Bongiorno’s carefully nuanced playing is “easy on the ears,” with only momentary flourishes of drama to act as a counterpoint to the overall gentle mood, which flows effortlessly throughout the album’s entirety. From the ethereal minimalism of “Stargazer” to the subtle jazziness of “Midnight Blue” to the peacefulness of the closing track, “Breathless,” Mesmerized is an ideal late-night listen for piano lovers.”

"I like a full sound, but I love the effect that using only one, two, or three instruments has in communicating a song. I think that it is important that the listener be able to understand what words I sing, and that they are able to appreciate the quality of the instruments I use."
